

The Ebola Hot Zone across central Africa in October, 2002. The geo-temporal risk indicates the probability of appearance of the Ebola virus based in part on satellite data. Scientific analysis identifies areas where Ebola hemorrhagic fever is endemic. If confirmed by groundwork, this is the 'Ebola Hot Zone.' The marked locations show where the Ebola virus has been recorded since 1976.